

I am writing to voice my concern over the FCC's proposal to let low power FM stations take over existing FM signals simply because they are local translators. These existing translators are in these communities because the community wanted them! These signals were not forced upon the community, but were invited to be part of the local community. To allow others to take over an existing signal is a miscarriage of justice. Companies and many individuals have poured in time and money to serve these communities through a translator with the permission and full knowledge of the FCC. To now declare that the FCC needs to change these signals is simply wrong. You made the rules, those who followed the rules shouldn't lose their signals because you have had a change of mind. I can't help but think this represents an anti-Christian bias. A large number of translators are owned and operated by Christian broadcasters. In an era where we have nudity during the Super Bowl, foul language on most radio stations morning, noon and night, why would you attempt to get rid of thousands of translators that promote clean living without the sewer running wild across our radios & tvs? Christian broadcasters are proclaiming a positive, better way to live and behave. Can you give me a reasonable explanation? I would be anxious to hear from you. Thank you for letting me voice my concerns. I appreciate the opportunity and thank you for listening.
